

CONTAINERS THAT EARN THEIR SPACE

Kitchen Container Guide

Containers do not create order, they hold a decision you already made. Buy after you have decided what lives where, not before.

TWO RULES BEFORE BUYING ANYTHING

- Measure the shelf, depth and height, and write it down
- Decide what goes in it before you buy it

WHAT TO DECANT

- Flour, sugar, rice, pasta, cereal
- Anything you buy in bulk
- Anything in a bag that will not stand up
- Snacks that come in a box of loose packets

WHAT TO LEAVE ALONE

- Anything in good packaging already
- Anything with cooking instructions you need
- Tins and jars
- Anything you buy rarely

CHOOSING

- Square over round, round wastes a third of the shelf
- One size in multiples beats five sizes
- Clear over opaque, always
- Airtight for anything that goes stale
- Stackable only if you will actually unstack them

LABELS

- Label the shelf edge as well as the container
- In every language spoken in the house
- Include the reorder level

We build these systems for you.

Most people know which area is weakest. What they lack is the two uninterrupted weeks it takes to fix it. That is the part we do: we build it, document it in English and Spanish, train the people who use it, and stay on to adjust it.

Book a consultation at sortandplace.com