

KEEP OR TOSS, WITHOUT THE STALL

Kitchen Decluttering Guide

Kitchen items are uniquely hard because most of them work. Nothing is broken, so nothing obviously goes. The question is not whether it functions but whether it earns its shelf.

WORK CATEGORY BY CATEGORY

- | | |
|--|--|
| ■ All the mugs, together, at once | ■ Every utensil in one pile on the counter |
| ■ All the plastic containers and every lid | ■ Small appliances, all of them out |

THE DECIDING QUESTIONS

- | | |
|----------------------------------|-------------------------------------|
| ■ Used in the last twelve months | ■ Do I have three of these |
| ■ Would I buy it again today | ■ Is there a lid for this, actually |

WHERE PEOPLE GET STUCK

- | | |
|---|---|
| ■ Wedding gifts you have never used | ■ Anything kept for a version of your cooking that never happened |
| ■ The pan that is too heavy to lift when full | ■ Spare sets for guests who bring their own |

WHAT GOES WITHOUT DEBATE

|-------------------------------------|---|
| ■ Chipped or cracked anything | ■ Duplicate tools where one is clearly better |
| ■ Plastic that is stained or warped | ■ Lidless containers and container-less lids |

THE ONE CUPBOARD

Name the cupboard you avoid opening. Start there next Saturday.

We build these systems for you.

Most people know which area is weakest. What they lack is the two uninterrupted weeks it takes to fix it. That is the part we do: we build it, document it in English and Spanish, train the people who use it, and stay on to adjust it.
