

ONE PLACE THE HOUSEHOLD LOOKS

Command Center Checklist

A command center works when it is on the path people already walk. Put it where the bags land, not where it looks best.

LOCATION FIRST

- | | |
|---|------------------------------------|
| ■ On the route between door and kitchen | ■ Visible without going looking |
| ■ Where bags and mail already land | ■ Lit well enough to read at night |

WHAT IT HOLDS

- | | |
|--|--------------------------------------|
| ■ One shared calendar, large enough to read standing | ■ Keys, one hook each |
| ■ Landing zone per person, labelled | ■ Charging point, out of the walkway |
| ■ Mail sorter with an action slot | |

WHAT IT MUST NOT BECOME

- | | |
|---|--------------------------------------|
| ■ Not a display shelf | ■ Not a second junk drawer, vertical |
| ■ Not storage for anything without a date | |

THE HABIT THAT MAKES IT WORK

- | | |
|---|--|
| ■ Everything gets emptied at the same time each day | ■ Anything with no action goes straight to the bin |
| ■ The calendar is looked at once a week, out loud | |

WHERE YOURS GOES

Name the wall. It should be somewhere you already stop, not somewhere you would have to start stopping.

We build these systems for you.

Most people know which area is weakest. What they lack is the two uninterrupted weeks it takes to fix it. That is the part we do: we build it, document it in English and Spanish, train the people who use it, and stay on to adjust it.
