

DECIDE WITHOUT RESOLVING THE FEELING FIRST

The Decluttering Roadmap

Most decluttering stalls on the items that carry weight. You do not have to resolve the feeling to make the decision. Sort first, feel later.

FOUR BOXES, NO FIFTH

- | | |
|----------|---|
| ■ Keep | ■ Sell, only if you will actually list it this week |
| ■ Donate | ■ Undecided, with a deadline written on the box |

ORDER TO WORK IN

- | | |
|---|---|
| ■ Start where the volume is, not where the emotion is | ■ Then anything broken, expired, or the wrong size |
| ■ Duplicates first, they need no decision | ■ Sentimental last, when your decision muscle is warm |

QUESTIONS THAT MOVE THINGS

- | | |
|---|---|
| ■ Would I buy this again today, at full price | ■ Am I keeping the object or the version of me that used it |
| ■ If it vanished, would I replace it | ■ Does someone else need this more than I need it in a cupboard |

THE UNDECIDED BOX

- | | |
|---|---|
| ■ Seal it, date it six months out | ■ Do not review the contents, reviewing restarts the decision |
| ■ If you have not opened it by then, donate it unopened | |

We build these systems for you.

Most people know which area is weakest. What they lack is the two uninterrupted weeks it takes to fix it. That is the part we do: we build it, document it in English and Spanish, train the people who use it, and stay on to adjust it.

Book a consultation at sortandplace.com